NEW AUTO CRUSADE OPENED

Speed Maniacs, Beware the A. L. A. Police Squad of "White Flyers!"

THREE STATES AID MOVE

The Automobile Legal Association today began a vigorous crusade in Greater Boston against reckless motorists who are not only a menace to sane automobilists but have maimed or slain scores of pedestrians. This new campaign against the speed maniacs within the next few days will be extended until all Massachusetts and Rhode Island and Southern New Hampshire will be thoroughly covered by expert motorcyclists who will secure evidence to be used by the association in prosecuting all motorists who violate the automobile laws of the three States.

The start was made today when six motorcyclists in the employ of the A. L. A. met at the corner of Commonwealth and Massachusetts avenues. At 8.30 o'clock the half dozen men were off, each being assigned to cover a portion of the Metropolitan district. Because of their uniforms of white coats and caps, and their duties, the motorcyclists have already been named the "white flyers."

Starts with $4,000 Fund.

The A. L. A.'s crusade is in line with the campaign carried on by the Boston AMERICAN following a series of "death car" accidents in which a number of men, women and children have been killed or seriously injured in or near Boston. The A. L. A. is widely known as an organization of automobilists who demand the enforcement of the laws. So earnest is the organization in this purpose that it hase appropriated $4,000 as a starter for its crusade. It is the aim of the association to make the roads safe not only for pedestrians but for sane motorists as well, and to drive the speed-crazed owners and drivers from the streets and roads.

The crusade is a unique departure among automobile organizations. William A. Thibodeau of No. 6 Beacon street, general counsel for the A. L. A., declared today that the association's adoption of the plan of law enforcement and road patrolling is a splendid move and one calculated to safeguard the public and to assure the public that the great majority of automobilists are anxious to compel drivers to operate cars in a safe manner.

Seek Aid of Public.

Attorney Thibodeau said:

"I think this new feature of the A. L. A.'s work will appeal to the public. We are employing experienced motorcyclists to secure evidence against those who operate recklessly or while under the influence of intoxicating liquors. They are mounted on new and powerful motorcycles and will patrol the streets and roads weekdays and Sundays.

"These men will report their evidence to us. We will do the prosecuting of all offenders. They will also procure evidence to prosecute those drivers of horse-drawn vehicles who fail to comply with the law which requires them to carry lights at night.

"The members of that association will profit from this service by reason of the fact that these men have instructions to assist members of the association in pumping tires, warning them of bad roads, directing them around detours where roads are under construction and generally to assist the members of the association in every way within their power, as well as to extend the courtesy of the association to visiting motorists.

Capt. E. T. Redmond Weds.

Captain Eugene T. Redmond of Salem, formerly beau brummel of the Second Corps Cadets, and a broker with offices at 85 Devonshire street, Boston, was married on June 3 at SanFrancisco, to Miss Helen Jennette Eames, daughter of Alfred Warner Eames of Honolulu.

SNOW IN CHICAGO AS BOSTON MELTS

3 p. m. Temperature in Boston, 86

CHICAGO, June 7.—Snow fell in Chicago today, fourteen hours after the season's warmest weather—a temperature of 91 degrees was registered. The falling of snowflakes lasted ten minutes in Austin, a suburb of Chicago. A forty-five-mile gale direct from the north sent the mercury down 47 degrees in fifteen hours. Many persons were hurt in the wind storm and property damage estimated at several thousands of dollars was caused.

Hottest Day, but Colder Tomorrow

Today was the hottest day thus for in 1913.

At 2 p. m. the mercury in the Weather Bureau thermometers went up to 87 and was still rising. It was not a record-breaker, for back in 1884 the temperature was 90 in the shade.

"Cheer up," said Weather Prophet Smith in his lookout atop the Federal building. "A cold wave is on the way. It should strike Boston by Sunday afternoon."

The Weather Man added that Sunday is going to be fair, with the exception of an occasional shower.

2 HURT, 4 ARRESTS IN RIOT

Mob of I. W. W. Strikers Stone Shop and Assaults Spectators.

TRY TO RESCUE PRISONER.

The worst riot so far in the I. W. W. barbers' strike came today at the corner of Central and India streets, where 100 barbers and about 500 sympathizers attacked a barber shop, threw stones, assaulted spectators and then clashed with the police.

One policeman and two spectators were injured and four arrests were made.

Patrolman Bresnahan of Court square station, one of the first officers on the scene, was hit on a leg with a brick. He dived into the crowd and arrested Charles Mareanno, twenty years old of No. 825 Albany street, as the brick-thrower. Effort was made to rescue Mareanno, but other policemen came to Bresnahan's aid and helped him hold his man. Bresnahan was badly lamed by the brick.

Spectators Assaulted.

In addition to the injury to Bresnahan, two spectators were assaulted and badly beaten.

Those arrested besides Mareano were: Charles Fernandi, twenty-seven years, of No. 634 Tremont street, charged with breaking a window in Albert Ferrari's barber shop at No. 52 Central street.

Albert Costello, twenty-eight years, of No. 13 Sheafe street, North End, charged with assault on Albert Tutelu of No. 4 India street, a spectator.

Police Disperse Mob.

The trouble began when 100 I. W. W. pickets tried to get four of their union men, who had returned to work for an employer at South Market and Commercial streets, to come out again saying no man could go back until Monday. Two men refused to come out and disorder began. The rioters moved along toward Central street and gathered in front of the Ferrari shop at No. 52.

The police say that Fernandi threw a stone that broke Ferrari's window.

Vinveso Fanel, forty-three years old, of No. 236 Vine street, Everett, was held by Chief Justice Bolster in Boston Municipal Court today in $100 bonds for a continued hearing on June 10 on a charge of threatening to dynamite Amado Di Perri's barber shop at No. 192 Atlantic avenue. Fanel denied the charge. He was arrested at home early today by Special Officer Carey from City Hall police station, with the co-operation of the Everett police.

Sixty members of the A. F. or L. Barbers' Union, who say they feared to obey the union order to return to work on account of threats made by I. W. W. barbers if they did, have called a meeting of all the A. F. of L. Italian barbers for 10 a. m. tomorrow in Paine Memorial.

Strike Sends Cost of Shines to a Dime

Sixty Bosses Out of Eighty to Put Sign Up Monday.

"SHINE—TEN CENTS."

That's the notice which will confront patrons of most of the union bootblack stands Monday morning, according to announcement today by sixty "bosses" out of the eighty who have signed the new wage and hour agreement of the A. F. of L. Bootblacks' Union.

The "bosses" propose to take the increased cost of the shine out of the "shinee," so to speak.

Two more shops signed the A. F. of L. agreement today, one on Canal street and the other in Boston Stock Exchange.

The employers still holding out include Berrmice & Co., who control the Elevated stands, and Pike's stand on School street, but J. K. Hayes, attorney for these two, say that they will pay the union wages and keep union hours, but will not sign the union agreement. There are now 250 union boys back at work and thirty out.

The A. F. of L. bootblacks said today that the Greek bootblacks have been formed into an organization and have signed up in five-year contracts at $9 a week, with an eleven-hour day, the employers to get all tips.

HURLBURT DEMANDS PUBLICITY

Counsel for Wool Magnate Calls for Swift Punishment of Jury Tamperers.

DISAGREE ON ATTEAUX.

The Wood-Atteaux-Collins jury today reported a verdict of not guilty on the indictments against President William M. Wood of the American Woolen Company. The jury disagreed on the case against Frederick E. Atteaux. Dennis J. Collins was found guilty on two counts.

Immediately after the verdict had been announced, Henry F. Hurlburt, counsel for Mr. Wood, addressed the court and demanded a public hearing to investigate the attempt to bribe Juror Morris Shuman.

Attorney Hurlburt said: "No attorney was named, in the press accounts, but I know that I was meant. I demand a public hearing, to exonerate myself and punish the guilty parties."

District Attorney Pelletier likewise urged a full public investigation.

Judge John C. Crosby then announced that next Wednesday, at 10 o'clock, a public investigation of the charges will be held. In making the announcement, he said, "I know of no such proceeding before in this Commonwealth, but in this case it is justifiable."

To Summon Every Juror.

District Attorney Pelletier announced that he would summon every member of the jury to be present at this public hearing. A police inspector, when the jury was excused, led Juror Morris Shuman, upon whom the attempt to bribe was made, before the Grand Jury, which had been held over to commence an immediate and searching investigation of all the facts.

Sensation piled on sensation, and the spectators in court were breathless, from the moment the jury came in, till the attorneys made their way to the corridors and left the building.

Wood Grateful for Verdict.

After the verdict Mr. Wood's friends hurried to congratulate him. He issued the following statement:

I am profoundly grateful for the verdict which the jury has rendered in my behalf in the so-called dynamite case. I had no reason at any time to assume that the verdict would be otherwise. I was not conscious of any guilt in connection with the alleged conspiracy, because I was in no way implicated in it, nor did I have any knowledge of it.

I was given a fair trial, and I have to fault whatever to find with the conduct of the case by the District Attorney. The Grand Jury having found an indictment against me and others, Mr. Pelletier felt it his duty to press the case for trial, and the best possible vindication that could come to me was through the verdict by the jury.

It has been a long and hard ordeal to pass through. I have no bitterness toward anyone that has been connected with the prosecution.

Innocence Established.

When I was indicted I asked the public to await the outcome, and said at that time that I would continue to tell only the public of my innocence, but also the District Attorney himself. This, I believe, has been accomplished.

I wish to thank my friends, who by the thousands have from time to time expressed their sympathy for me and their confidence in my innocence.

Before the Grand Jury today, the police inspectors who have worked on the case were expected to be witnesses, as well as Juror Shuman. District Attorney Pelletier personally conducted the investigation.

A moment after the jury's foreman, Charles J. Wesson, had announced the verdict, Attorney Hurlburt was on his feet. He said:

"Before your Honor dismisses this jury, may I address myself to them on a matter of the greatest public importance?

"There have been statements in the public press that a juror has been approached and that an attempt was made to influence his verdict by offering him $200.

"While this story in the press did not name anyone, I know that it was meant for myself. I am an officer of the court. Bribery, or attempted bribery of a juror is a crime. If any official of the court is implicated in such a proceeding, it is the duty of the court to punish him.

Publicity a Duty Now.

"I know District Attorney Pelletier does not believe I have been guilty of this attempt. No one who knows me would believe it. But it is the duty of the court to have an open and public investigation.

"I understand the Grand Jury will investigate—but their proceedings must be secret.

"It is my right, and the right of my client, to get at the truth. The guilty should be punished. I move that Your Honor order an investigation of a public nature. Any member of the bar who is guilty of an attempt to interfere or to approach a juror, should be dismissed in the presence of this court."

As Attorney Hurlburt sat down there was an outbreak of applause in the court, which was quickly hushed. District Attorney Pelletier said:

"I realize the importance of this matter, and I believe it should be most thoroughly threshed out.

"The Grand Jury is moving in the case. It is not proper for me to say what the Grand Jury will do.

"I do not wish to disclose what I know in this matter, but I will say that I am going to do the proper thing if it takes forever.

His Name Used by Rogue.

"I know—as does everyone else who knows him—that Mr. Hurlburt never could have been connected in any way with this proceeding. His name was used by the consummate rogue and rascal who approached the juror, Shuman. And I believe the court is glad, as I am glad, that Juror Shuman had the courage and honesty to report this matter to the court."

Judge Crosby said:

"I never knew of a public hearing on a matter of this kind in the history of the Commonwealth. Nevertheless, in view of the importance of the case, the implied charges and the requests of counsel for both sides, I believe it is proper for me to direct a separate investigation from that of the Grand Jury.

"I will therefore direct that a public hearing be held. And I wish to say that I agree with the District Attorney in considering Mr. Hurlburt a reputable member of the bar, entirely incapable of taking part in such an attempt as this."

Mr. Hurlburt said: "Any person who attempts to influence a juror is guilty of contempt of court and should be punished. I want an investigation, and I want one soon, and I want it open to the public."

Wednesday Fixed for Hearing.

Judge Crosby said: "I can open this hearing Monday morning at 10."

District Attorney Pelletier said:

"Your Honor, the Grand Jury opens its investigation in a few minutes, and by Wednesday will have something definite to report to this court. I would suggest that the hearing be set for Wednesday on that account."

Judge Crosby acceded to this request, and the hearing was set for Wednesday next, at 10 o'clock.

Judge Crosby at once congratulated the jurors and dismissed them. District Attorney Pelletier announced that each of them would be summoned to be present next Wednesday. Inspector Lynch and District Attorney Pelletier then took Juror Sherman before the Grand Jury to tell his story.

The jury came in at 9:35 after having struggled with the case since 1:30 the afternoon before. That made a total period of twenty hours and twenty-five minutes that the jury was out, but the first hour after it received the case yesterday was devoted to luncheon.

The courtroom was crowded. The three defendants were sitting outside the rail, as usual, when the jury arrived. Callius was in his usual jaunty, Wood was chatting with counsel, members of his family and friends at the left side of the room, Attaeux was sitting by Wood.

The jurymen were pale and disheveled. They even blinked as they entered the courtroom.

Assistant Clerk John Campbell called each defendant by name and the three men rose and stood at the rail in order. Then the clerk called for the verdict from the foreman of the jury, saying:

"What say you as to Mr. Wood on the first count?"

"Not guilty," replied Foreman Wesson, distinctly.

Wood's black eyes brightened and his lips began to form themselves for a smile.

Clerk Campbell continued: "What say you as to Mr. Attaeux on the first count?"

Foreman Wesson—"Disagreement."

Attaeux's pale features set into stern lines.

Clerk—"What say you as to Mr. Callins on the first count?"

Foreman Wesson—"Guilty."

Callins, chewing gum as usual, seemed to show less emotion than anyone else in the courtroom. Whatever verdict he expected, he made no sign.

The verdicts on the different counts were taken in order, the result on each count being given first for Wood, then for Attaeux, then for Callins.

The indictment charged each man, in six counts, with conspiracy to plant dynamite in Lawrence in the big textile strike, in order to discredit the strikers. The different counts were in effect different descriptions of the same act.

The reading of the verdicts took three minutes. The tabulated result was as follows:

Wood was found not guilty on all counts.

The jury disagreed on Attaeux on all but the sixth count, and that count was not considered because Judge Crosby had directed the jury to return verdicts of not guilty for all three defendants on the sixth count.

Callins was found guilty on the first and second counts and not guilty on the others.

Graft Boys Leg Bone Into Crooked Spine

Acts As Staff to Straighten Hump Back in Tuberculosis Case.

BALTIMORE, Md., June 7.—Albert Schnell, a young Baltimore boy, was taken to the Kernan Hospital for Children a few weeks ago suffering from tuberculosis of the spine, which caused his back to hump to unsightly proportions. After he had been in the hospital several days Albert's left leg was cut wide open from just below the knee to the ankle. The bone was exposed and a piece about a foot long and about as wide as the nail in the first finger was shaved off.

A kind of stuffing was then placed in the leg to give it the shape it should have and the wound was closed. Albert was turned with his back exposed and a large flap of flesh cut just to the left of the crooked spine. This was raised so that the diseased portions of the spine were exposed. These were cut away and a groove made in the backbone into which the strip of leg bone was deftly inserted and bound there with wire. The flesh was brought into its original place and sewed.

The bone which was placed in the boy's spine will act as a staff to make the back strong. He can now plant his feet firmly on the floor and as soon as his strength returns he will be able to walk as erect as any other child.

FOUR HURT IN STRIKE RIOTING AT HOPEDALE

HOPEDALE, June 7.—Four strike-breakers were seriously hurt in a pitched battle at 6:45 a. m. today between 50 strike-breakers and 200 strikers from the Draper plant. The resumption of violence was unexpected and caught the police napping.

For three days there had been no outbreak and police vigilance had been relaxed. Taking advantage of this the strikers marched quietly toward "Brick City," the strike-breakers' colony on Prospect Heights.

At the top of Water street hill, near the Hopedale-Milford line, the strikers met fifty strike-breakers on their way to work.

Stones were thrown, then the combatants came together with clubs. Though outnumbered four to one, the strike-breakers fought back fiercely.

Word was sent to police headquarters. Thirty State officers, deputy sheriffs and local police were rushed to the fight in automobiles.

The strikers scattered and no arrests were made. None of the strikers was seriously hurt, so far as known, but the police found four strike-breakers practically out of commission through stone and club bruises on the head and face.

The injured men were taken back to their boarding houses and physicians were called. Their names were withheld.

STATE POLICE BEGIN WORK ON BIG ICE PROBE

The State Police have already begun an investigation of complaints against the Ice Trust received by Attorney-General James M. Swift from hundreds of small dealers and consumers. The Attorney-General hopes by means of these letters to obtain evidence that there is no agreement among the dealers to control either price or territory, or both, in restraint of trade.

He welcomes all information from the public which may aid him in this direction, and attributes much of the success he has already had to the publicity given by the AMERICAN to the ice probe called for the House of Representatives through the order introduced by Representative Martin Hays.

Boston will be the first city to be investigated, and Lynn, where the situation, since a "friendly meeting" of the ice dealers last year, has been particularly bad, will be the next.

Monday the State police will call on members of big ice firms said to be the worst offenders, requesting them to appear before the Attorney-General in person, bringing their books and papers for his inspection.

Two Suits Pending.

Two suits now pending in the United States and State courts charge the existence of a combination in restraint of trade in violation of the Sherman law. Both allege the existence of an Ice Trust.

The suit in the United States District Court has been brought by James R. Corey of Spencer, former president of the Independent Ice Company, and Jarvis W. Ferris of Woburn, former treasurer of the Independent Ice Company. The suit is against the Independent Ice Company, George A. Taylor of Somerville, its treasurer; the Boston Ice Company and its president and treasurer, Frank J. Bartlett of Malden; and the American Ice Company of New York and its president, Wesley M. Oler of New York. It is for an accounting and treble damages on the allegation of injury to the business of the Independent Ice Company by a combination in restraint of trade.

It is alleged that the combination began as far back as 1904 with a view to monopolize the ice business of Boston and New England and to restrain trade and commerce. The allegation is that the Boston Ice Company secured control of the Independent Ice Company by securing the controlling interest in the shares of its stock, and that substantially the directors of the Independent Ice Company were elected as named by the Boston Ice Company and the American Ice Company.

Allege Trust Methods.

The American Company and Oler are alleged to have directed the Independent Ice Company not to antagonize the Boston Ice Company in any way, and not to interfere with the customers of the last named concern.

The plaintiffs allege that the Independent Ice Company is restricted by the defendants in the price of ice, is forbidden to sell to the customers of the Boston Ice Company, and that it has been required to do business with the Boston Ice Company at a loss, having its customers turned over to the larger concern.

This suit is now pending before Judge Dodge on a demurrer. A second suit in which the allegations are similar has been brought by the same plaintiffs against the same defendants in the Supreme Judicial Court, County of Suffolk, and has been assigned for a hearing before G. L. Huntress, who has an office in Sears building, as master on June 23. The case for the plaintiffs is being conducted by Alexander Lincoln of the law firm of Whipple, Sears & Ogden, Tremont building.

Beauty Doctor Tells Secret

Detroit Beauty Doctor Gives Simple Recipe to Darken Gray Hair and Promote Its Growth.

Miss Alice Whitney, a well-known beauty doctor of Detroit, Mich., recently gave out the following statement: "Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home, at very little cost, that will darken gray hair, promote its growth and make it soft and glossy. To half pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ oz. glycerine. These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at a very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray haired person look twenty years younger. It is also fine to promote the growth of the hair, relieve itching and scalp disease, and is excellent for dandruff and falling hair.—Advertisement.

Adele Ritchie Defies Hoodoo

Weds Friday 13th; and for Cash

ADELE RITCHIE

Adele Ritchie, the actress, who for several years has been the chum of Mrs. Tom Pierce, known throughout New England as one of the most daring riders to hounds in the country, and divorced wife of Thomas W. Pierce the Topsham millionaire, and whose escapades with Mrs. Pierce have afforded many bright stories for society gossip, is to marry "for money."

Miss Ritchie's wedding to Charles Nelson Bell, a Fifth avenue importer, who has been assisting her to run Applejack farm, leased by the actress over a year ago, will take place on Friday, the Thirteenth, at the thirteenth hour of the day, 1913. The ceremony will be performed on the farm and only close friends will be present.

"I didn't want the news of my marriage to get around," said Miss Ritchie today. "I'm marrying for money, and I'm not going to quit the stage. It is to be a quiet family wedding. I don't know just who I'll invite, but I'll do it informally. I'm afraid I shall blush when I go to the Town Clerk to get my license, for I'll have to say I'm thirty-six years old."

The thirteen sudden omens enter into the coincidence of the date and time of the wedding. The date was set for the return of Miss Ritchie's adopted daughter, Marion King, from Villa Marie Convent in Westchester.

"Big Tim" Sullivan Sails from Boston

Famous Tammany Leader Goes Abroad in Search for Health.

Timothy D. "Big Tim" Sullivan, New York congressman and Tammany leader, sailed from Boston today on the Hamburg-American liner Cincinnati under the close guard of his brother Pat and his personal physician, Dr. Robert F. Kennedy. The famous friend of the Bowery poor, who is ill as a result of his worry over his financial losses, which lessened his fortune by $700,000 in two years' time, is being taken abroad in the hope that the baths at the German resorts may restore his mind and health.

"Big Tim" was brought to Boston, as it was feared the gathering of his friends from the East Side would prove too exciting for him if he sailed from New York. With him at the new Commonwealth pier were his half brother, "Larry" Mulligan, Mrs. Mulligan and "Manny" Blumenstiel, "Big Tim's" personal counsel.

RELEASE OF DR. GRAVES IS NOW ADMITTED

LONDON, June 7.—The AMERICAN'S story of the release of Dr. Armgaard Karl Graves, the German spy, after serving only four months of his eighteen months' sentence, has created a sensation here.

The London Times, which speaks for the government, guardedly concedes that Graves may have been released to enter the secret service of Great Britain as he declares. In its article on the Graves sensation the Times says that although the authorities refuse to make any statement, "there is reason to believe that the report is correct that his release was due to purely private considerations. It is understood he was removed from Glasgow prison some months ago."

The Evening News says:

"The fact that a German spy sentenced at Edinburgh June 23 of last year to eighteen months' imprisonment, has been released, apparently soon after his conviction, became public only today.

"The secret came out in a very curious way. A Central News correspondent quoted from the New York American a statement made by the spy, Armgaard Karl Graves, that he was released in order that he might join the British secret service.

"He went on to tell an extraordinary story of international politics behind the scenes. The Evening News realized that whatever might be said about Graves' story the fact of his release was new and surprising. Inquiry was made of a high official of the Scottish office at Whitehall who said the only information he could communicate was that Graves had been released in due course of law.

"The minimum term of imprisonment, even had his behavior been most exemplary, would have been thirteen and one-half months, and he would not have been freed in the ordinary course, therefore, until September. The mystery of his release is made all the more perplexing by the refusal of the authorities, including those at Glasgow prison, to give either date or reason for the man's liberation."

All the London papers produce the AMERICAN'S story, adding the result of London and Scotland inquiries, which are met by remarkable reticence on the part of the authorities.

GOV. FOSS SIGNS RESOLVE FOR 'L' INVESTIGATION

Governor Foss today signed a resolve providing for a State investigation of the service furnished by the Boston Elevated and Bay State Railway companies in the Metropolitan district.

This measure was passed by the Legislature following the campaign made by citizens' associations in the Metropolitan District for the improvement in street railway service. The AMERICAN was foremost in the support of this measure.

The resolve directs the Railroad Commissioners and the Boston Transit Commission to investigate and to report their conclusions and recommendations to the next Legislature not later than January 10, 1914. The commissioners shall give public hearings, and are empowered to administer oaths and to require the attendance of witnesses and the production of books and papers bearing on the investigation. The sum of $5,000 has been appropriated for the work.

Boardman and Miss Mabel Boardman, his host and hostess while he is in Washington.

When Mr. Taft arrived at the executive offices he announced that he had come to reclaim a large number of his law books which were in the President's office. He told Secretary Tumulty that about two-thirds of the books there were his private property.

Osler Was "Peeved," Says His Niece

ST. LOUIS, June 7.—Dr. William Osler had a grouch when he said every man should be chloroformed after he reached the age of sixty, according to Miss Edna Aline Osler, niece of the famous physician, who is at Edwardsville, Ill., gathering data for the Historical Research Society of Philadelphia.

"Uncle was only jesting when he said that," Miss Osler declared. "He was then in Johns Hopkins University. It was one day when things had gone wrong with him.

"A friend had been commiserating him upon his disgruntled state of mind, and uncle remarked sarcastically: 'Oh, a man isn't any use after he's sixty years old. He is just a pest and ought to be chloroformed and quietly gotten rid of.'"

NEW YORK, June 7.—Mrs. Blanche A. W. Heye, formerly of Wellesley Hills, Mass., was today awarded $15,000 a year alimony and $2,000 counsel fees pending the result of her suit for divorce against George G. Heye, the banker and son of a Standard Oil magnate, from whose estate he inherited $1,000,000. In her petition Mrs. Heye asked for $78,000 alimony a year and $15,000 counsel fees. Her request brought from Justice Aspinwall a stern rebuke for society women who lead extravagant lives.

"I will not allow such alimony," said the justice. "These New York society women live too high. They go to fashionable hotels, drink high balls and smoke cigarettes instead of staying at home and trying to make husbands happy."

PART I.—(Continued)

THE lawyer sought no evasion of the issue. For that matter, he was coming to have an increasing respect, even admiration for this young woman, who endured insult and ignominy with a spirit so sturdy, and met stratagem with other stratagem better devised. So, now, he made his answer with frank honesty.

"It is your constitutional right, Miss Turner."

Mary turned her clear eyes on the inspector, and awaited from that official a reply that was not forthcoming. Truth to tell, Burke was far from comfortable under that survey.

"Well, Inspector?" she inquired, at last.

"CONSTITUTION DON'T GO"

Burke took refuge, as his wont was when too hard pressed, in a mighty bellow.

"The Constitution don't go here!" It was the best he could do, and it shamed him, for he knew its weakness. Again wrath surged in him, and it surged high. He welcomed the advent of Cassidy, who came hurrying in with a grin of satisfaction on his stolid face.

"Say, Chief," the detective said with animation, in response to Burke's glance of inquiry, "we've got Garson."

Mary's face fell, though the change of expression was almost imperceptible. Only Demarest, a student of much experience, observed the fleeting display of repressed emotion. When the Inspector took thought to look at her, she was as impassive as before. Yet, he was minded to try another ruse in his desire to defeat the intelligence of this woman. To this end, he asked Gilder and the District Attorney to withdraw, while he should have a private conversation with the prisoner. As she listened to his request, Mary smiled again in sphinxlike fashion, and there was still on her lips an expression that caused the official a pang of doubt, when, at last, the two were left alone together, and he darted a surreptitious glance toward her. Nevertheless, he pressed on his device valiantly.

"Now," he said, with a marked softening of manner, "I'm going to be your friend."

"Are you?" Mary's tone was non-committal.

"Yes," Burke declared heartily. "And I mean it! Give up the truth about young Gilder. I know he shot Griggs, of course. But I'm not taking any stock in that burglar story—not a little bit! No court would, either. What was really back of the killing?" Burke's eyes narrowed cunningly. "Was he jealous of Griggs? Well, that's what he might do then. He's always been a worthless young cub. A rotten deal like this would be about his gait, I guess. . . . Tell me, now, why did he shoot Eddie Griggs?"

"HE DIDN'T KILL HIM."

There was coarseness a-plenty in the Inspector's pretence, but it possessed a solitary fundamental virtue, it played on the heart of the woman whom he questioned, aroused it to wrath in defence of her mate. In a second, all poise fled from this girl whose soul was blossoming in the blest realization that a man loved her purely, unselfishly. Her words came stumblingly in their haste. Her eyes were near to black in their anger.

"He didn't kill him! He didn't kill him!" she fairly hissed. "Why, he's the most wonderful man in the world. You shan't hurt him. Nobody shall hurt him! I'll fight to the end of my life for Dick Gilder!"

Burke was beaming joyously. At last—a long last!—his finesse had won the victory over this woman's subtleties.

"Well, that's just what I thought," he said, with smug content. "And now, then, who did shoot Griggs? We've got every one of the gang. They're all crooks. See here," he went on, with a sudden change to the respectful in his manner, "why don't you start fresh? I'll give you every chance in the world. I'm dead on the level with you this time."

But he was too late. By now, Mary had herself well in hand again, vastly ashamed of the short period of self betrayal caused by the official's artifice against her heart. As she listened to the Inspector's assurances, the mocking expression of her face was not encouraging to that astute individual, but he persevered manfully.

"Just you wait," he went on cheerfully, "and I'll prove to you that I'm on the level about this, that I'm really your friend. . . . There was a letter came for you to your apartment. My men brought it down to me. I've read it. Here it is. I'll read it to you."

A LETTER

He picked up an envelope, which had been lying on the desk, and drew out the single sheet of paper it contained. Mary watched him, wondering much more than her expression revealed over this new development. Then, as she listened, quick interest touched her features to a new life. In her eyes leaped emotions to make or mar a life.

This was the letter.

"I can't go without telling you how sorry I am. There won't never be a time that I won't remember it was me got you sent up, that you did time in my place. I ain't going to forgive myself ever, and I swear I'm going straight always.

"Your true friend,

"HELEN MORRIS."

For once, Burke showed a certain delicacy. When he had finished the reading, he said nothing for a long minute—only sat with his cunning eyes on the face of the woman who was immobile there before him. And, as he looked on her in her slender elegance of form and gentlewomanly loveliness of face, a loveliness intelligent and refined beyond that of most women, he felt borne in on his consciousness the fact that here was one to be respected. He fought against the impression. It was to him preposterous, for she was one of that underworld against which he was ruthlessly at war. Yet, he could not altogether overcome his instinct toward a half-reverent admiration. And, as the letter proved, she had been innocent at the outset. She had been the victim of a mistaken justice, made outcast by the law she had never wronged. His mood of respect was inevitable, since he had some sensibilities, though they were coarsened, and they sensed vaguely the malestrom of emotions that now swirled in the girl's breast.

HER WONDERFUL HOUR

To Mary Turner, this was the wonderful hour. In it the vindication of her innocence was made complete. The story was there recorded in black and white on the page written by Helen Morris. It mattered little—or infinitely much!—that it came too late. She had gained her evil place in the world, was a notorious woman in fact, was even now a prisoner under suspicion of murder. Nevertheless, she felt a thrill of ecstasy over this written document—which it had never occurred to her to wrest from the girl at the time of the oral confession. Now that it had been proffered, the value of it loomed above almost all things else in the world. It proclaimed undeniably the wrong under which she had suffered. She was not the thief the court had adjudged her. She had a right to the respect of the world that had condemned her unjustly. Through her mind unfolded the panorama of the years—years black and crimson, years of irreparable miseries. But, by so much, the more majestic the triumph out of this final event! What had before been so long a mystery, known to herself only within this little while, now was become a matter of record, for all to read. Her acquired instinct of thinking within the law set the thing before her as something tremendous in its significence. This was a paper, visible evidence. This letter from the conscience-stricken girl, Helen Morris, was sufficient to prove innocence within the law. . . . Mary's eyes were luminous in the joy of the realization that for her, after all, rehabilitation might be in a measure possible, though nothing could ever repay the degradation of years infinitely worse than lost.

Burke's harsh voice, cadenced to a singular sympathy, broke in on her reverie of pleasure and of pain.

"You knew this?" he inquired.

"Yes," Mary said, frankly. "Two days ago."

Burke forgot his professional animosities in a curiosity that was a credit to his manhood.

"Did you tell old Gilder?" he asked.

Mary shook her head in negation.

"What would be the use?" she reminded him. "I had no proof. No one would believe me."

POISON CANDY FIGHT RENEWED BY CASSIDY

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

The AMERICAN scored for the seventh time yesterday in its pure food campaign when Governor Foss signed the Johnson-Cassidy ice cream bill.

This bill demands that hereafter all ice cream made in Massachusetts shall consist of at least seven per cent butter fat.

It is another blow to the adulteration of the people's food. It means that hereafter when you buy ice cream you will get cream, eggs and the real fruit coloring. Not rancid butter, rancid nuts and mechanical coloring dyes under the guise of ice cream.

Despite a stormy passage through the House this bill won out. The signing by Governor Foss is one of the greatest victories the AMERICAN has yet won in its campaign to protect the food of the people.

Originally introduced, this bill demanded that ice cream contain butter fat up to the government standard. The House of Representatives thought that five per cent. butter fat was enough. This was below the standard I ask for. But half a loaf is better than none, considering the make-up of the present House of Representatives.

Arsenic In Candy.

Do you know that your children are eating enough of arsenic, a deadly poison, daily in "penny sweets" to ruin their health and send them to early graves

Do you know your State Board of Health is doing nothing to prevent this?

You know arsenic fed in small quantities remains in the system. It works slowly but surely. When enough of it gathers, death in agony results.

Let's get this still nearer home.

You have heard of "Necco Sweets." Many of you have eaten them. The New England Confectionery Company makes them at No. 253 Summer street. Edwin S. Forbes, the president of this company, hired Lobbyists Innes and Turtle to defeat pure food legislation at the State House.

There is a case pending in the United States District Court against the New England Confectionery Company, alleging the selling of candy containing ARSENIC.

It is charged that the New England Confectionery Company on September 16, 1910, shipped to a firm in Elkins, W. Va., a quantity of confectionery known as "chess cakes" which were adulterated and misbranded. The alleged adulteration lay in the labeling this confection "candy." The government claimed THESE CAKES CONTAINED ARSENIC.

The "information" was filed June 15, 1912. After several technicalities being raised it was continued March 18 last. That means THE CASE IS STILL PENDING AND THE NEW ENGLAND CONFECTIONERY COMPANY IS CHARGED WITH SELLING CANDY CONTAINING ARSENIC

Health Board Facts.

Many dealers ARE ALLOWED TO SELL POISONED CANDY BY THE BOSTON BOARD OF HEALTH. I KNOW WHAT PART THE BOSTON BOARD OF HEALTH HAD IN KILLING THE BILL PROVIDING FOR A REORGANIZATION OF THE STATE BOARD OF HEALTH.

I WANT TO SERVE NOTICE ON THEM TODAY THAT THE AMERICAN IS NOT YET THROUGH WITH THIS CAMPAIGN FOR PURE FOOD.

Bernhardt Lauds America.

PARIS, June 7.—Unwearied by her long and strenuous tour, on reaching Paris Sarah Bernhardt received various friends. The great tragedienne says that whenever she visits America the French teachers in the country doubles and the number of French books sold triples.

Are You FAT?

I Was ONCE

I Reduced MYSELF

I was Fat, Uncomfortable, Looked Old, Felt Miserable, suffered with Rheumatism, Asthma, Neuralgia. When I worked or walked, I puffed like a Porpoise. I took every advertised medicine I could find. I Starved, Sweated, Exercised, Doctored and changed climate, but I ruined my digestion, felt like an invalid, but steadily gained weight. There was not a single plan or drug that I heard of that I did not try. I failed to reduce my weight. I dropped society, as I did not care to be the butt of all the jokes. It was embarrassing to have my friends tell me I was getting Stout, as no one knew it better than myself.

SOMETHING HAD TO BE DONE.

I began to study the cause of FAT. When I discovered the cause I found the remedy. The French method gave me an insight. I improved on that. Removed the objectionable features, added more pleasant ones, and then I tried my plan on myself for a week. It worked like Magic. I could have

at the end of the first week when the scales told me I had lost ten pounds by my simple, easy, harmless, Drugless Method. It was a pleasure then to continue until I regained my normal self in size. I feel fifteen years younger. I look fifteen years younger. My Double Chin has entirely disappeared. I can walk or work now. I can climb a mountain. I am normal in size. I can weigh just what I want to weigh. I am master of my own body now. I did not starve, but ate all I wanted to. I did not take Sweat Baths. I did not Drug. I used no Electricity, or harmful exercises, but I found the Simple, Sane, Common Sense WAY of reducing my weight and I applied it. I have tried it on others. My Doctor says I am a perfect picture of health now. I am no longer ailing. I am now a happy, healthy woman. Now, I am going to help others to be happy. I have written a book on the subject. If you are fat, I want you to have it. It will tell you all about my Harmless, Drugless Method. To all who send me their name and address I mail it FREE, as long as the present supply lasts. It will save you Money, Save you from Harmful Drugs, save you from Starvation Diets, Harmful Exercises, possibly save YOUR LIFE. It is yours for the asking, without a penny. Just send your name and address. A Postal Card will do and I'll be glad to send it so that you can quickly learn how to reduce yourself and be as happy as I am. Write today, as this advertisement may not appear again in this paper. HATTIE BIEL, 1035 Barclay, Denver, Colo.

William H. Dunbar, law partner of Louis D. Brandeis, searched the liner Cincinnati before it sailed today for Mrs. Francis Duer (Jones) Key of No. 473 Beacon street, member of the Country Club and connected with the celebrated Post family in New York. Attorney Dunbar, who is Mrs. Key's guardian, heard that she had secretly taken passage on the steamship at the last moment. The lawyer did not find Mrs. Key on board.

The entire party went from the church in automobiles to "Tanglewood," the one hundred and seventy-acre estate on the North Shore of Mahkeenac, where the reception was held. Rev. W. M. CHICAGO, June 7.—The Boston Pilgrims will wind up their series with the Chicago Cubs here today. Stallings' scrappy team hopes to make it three out of four from the locals.

The chances for a Boston victory are rather bright, as neither Bill James, who is boomed as a second Mathewson, nor "Lefty" Tyler has yet faced the Cubs. Both of these men are sterling performers and capable of holding their own with the best of them.

The Bostons are playing a slashing game of ball. The men are on their toes all the time and their work here has greatly impressed Chicago baseball "fans."

The Cubs will try hard to get an even break. Lavender, who has been billed to pitch for several days, may get his chance on the mound, but Evers may decide to use Smith at the last minute.

Motor Boats Off on 734-Mile Ocean Race

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., June 7.—Trim and snug and groomed as carefully as ever was the winner of a classic event on the turf, the staunch motor boats were tuned up in the basin at Essington, Pa., this morning for the start of the blue ribbon event of the motor boat world—the annual Gordon Bennett cup race to Bermuda. The distance is 734 miles. The boats were sent away from the starting line in the Delaware River off Race street at noon today.

Unless all records are to be broken, none of the boats will reach the islands before midnight Monday. The largest boat entered is the Barbara II., belonging to Vice-Commodore William M. Duncan of the Staten Island Yacht Club. She is fifty-one feet long and equipped with a four-cylinder 51.31 horse-power motor.

William D. Mulford's Toosam II., with a length of forty-five feet and a 31.68 horse-power motor, and William T. Wheeler's Tec, forty feet long, with a motor rating at 37.70 horse-power, are the other entries.

The Talaquah, owned by C. C. Hadley of Mount Vernon, N. Y., and the Tec of this city, which were among the entries, were unable to start.

George Orton Will Succeed Murphy

PHILADELPHIA, June 7.—George W. Orton, prominent factor in the University of Pennsylvania victories during his college days, was today settled upon as the successor to Mike Murphy as trainer of the U. of P. athletes. Orton has long been a prominent factor in the Amateur Athletic Union affairs.

Gibbons Next Friday.

NEW YORK, June 7.—Mike Gibbons, the St. Paul Battler, and Young Ahearn of New York will clash in this city in a ten-round affair on Friday night.

Right Off the Bat

By RILEY.

JOE BIRMINGHAM, the man who has done as many surprising things in the American League this season as Charley Dooin of Philadelphia has done in the National, is in town today with his bunch of clouters from Cleveland.

Birmingham brings with him a set of .300 warriors, led by "Sockless Joe" Jackson and "Larruping Larry" Lajoie, who would terrorize any pitching staff in history. Even Joe's own pinch hitter, Ryan, is a .300 artist.

If you hear a succession of mysterious explosions like the sound of hickory stick musketry this afternoon and during the first three afternoons of next week, you will know that that is Hugh Bedient, Charley Hall, Hubert Leonard, Joe Wood, George Foster, Ray Collins and Thomas O'Brien getting their's.

ALSO comes our old friend, Mr. Falkenberg, whom we all had forgotten some time since, but who is still so much alive that he has won ten ball games in a row, just like that, and is the only flinger extant with a chance to beat the record of Richard de Marquis de Marquard. Albeit, we opine that the tenth of the ten straight was 75 per cent. charity and 25 per cent. victory.

A BET was made today that the Pilgrims would be in fifth place when they finish with the westerners. The Boston man who made the bet received 5 to 3 for his money. It does not look unattractive at that. Stallings' men are only three and a half games behind fifth place. And after they finish with the Cubs today the worst third of their journey in the West is done. They have only St. Louis and Cincinnati to dispose of before tackling the Pirates in four games on the way home.

BUT why stop at fifth place? Pittsburgh is tied with the Cubs for that and fourth positions, with an average of .500. It ought to be almost as easy for Boston to take fourth place as fifth if they are good enough to climb that high.

THE Phillies drew another half game away from New York by beating the Pirates yesterday while the Giants were idle. They are now four games ahead of McGraw.

YESTERDAY was a day of close results in the American League. Boston beat Chicago, 4 to 3. Washington beat St. Louis, 1 to 0. Cleveland defeated New York 2 to 1, and the Athletics put it over Detroit, 8 to 7.

JUST when we thought we had a chance to creep up a little on the leaders by squeezing out a twelfth-inning victory from the White Sox, the Senators had to trot out Walter Johnson to eke out a miserable 1 to 0 game from the Browns. And the Athletics, although two runs behind in the ninth, had to tie up with the Tigers and win out. It is tough going for Stahl with the bunch ahead all winning the way they are.

IT has been many a day—in fact, we don't recall when it happened before—since Joe Wood cut loose three wild pitches in one game, like he did yesterday. Wood doesn't throw that kind of balls because he gets excited; he has better control of himself than that. The accident only emphasizes the serious damage done to his pitching thumb when he was injured in Philadelphia. His hand has never been just right since then. The ball is likely to go almost any place when curved with a lame thumb.

THE mighty have taken quite a tumble when Ad Wolgast, lightweight champion of a few months since, is only a 10 to 8 favorite over Johnny Dundee.

If pugilists were sensitive Wolgast might be embarrassed at accepting the weight Dundee will have to give him. We remember that it was not long since that Wolgast declined to yield two measly pounds to Packy McFarland, at the same time showing that McFarland was no fighter at all at even weights.

Based on Wolgast's own "dope," he will be a poor apology for a scrapper if he can't lick Dundee handily Tuesday night.

At that, our own opinion is that a few pounds are a whole lot more important in conversation than in fighting.

EDDIE KEEVIN says that Johnny Kilbane is side-stepping Jimmy Walsh on the proposition of a meeting July 4. Keevin is chasing Kilbane for a bout. We don't blame Kilbane if he dodges. Everybody's doin' it in the champion classes.

A "FAN" writes to ask our opinion as to the cause of the decline of American boxers and jockeys. "Easy money" is the answer. Think that over. It's the truth, looking at it from any angle.

* * *

STILL, there's always hope. The Yankees made a beautiful "clean-up" for the Australians in the Davis Cup tennis match yesterday.

AND if tennis is not strenuous enough for you, read what Captain Foxhall P. Keene of the American polo team will have to say to you in the Sunday AMERICAN about the chances of the Yankees in next week's great struggle with the Britons. This pony polo is some game. For excitement and risk, it seems to run a close third to aeroplaning and automobile racing, judging from the preliminary encounters.

Pugilism and football are not in the same class when bloodshed is considered as an important element in the sport.

SCHOOL TRACK STARS IN BIG MEETS TODAY

Three big schoolboy track meets will be held this afternoon. The national schoolboy championships are scheduled to take place in New York, the Harvard interscholastic games will be run off in the Stadium, while the Boston high school outdoor track meet will be staged at Wood Island Park.

Few local boys will compete in the national championships, but some close battles are expected at Wood Island and at the Stadium. Commerce is picked to win the championship of the Boston schools, but will have to go some in order to beat out English High and Dorchester High.

The most interest is being displayed in the Harvard interscholastic meet. Many seasoned performers are entered and several records may be broken.

Intense rivalry exists in the event, as the representatives of Exeter Academy, who in past years have scored many points, are not overwhelming favorites. And add to the unusual, Andover, Exeter's bitterest rival, will figure as a dangerous competitor.

Exeter will be handicapped by the loss of four of its men who have contributed largely to Exeter's success both indoors and out of doors this year.

Teschner Will Not Compete.

Eddie Teschner, the hero of the meet, will not compete today. Several others of Exeter's chief point scorers will be among the missing.

Irving T. Howe of English High School will figure conspicuously in the competition and his performance will demand much attention. Howe will perform unattached. He will compete in the century and 220 yards dashes.

Pitted against the Blue and Blue athlete will be a sterling field of sprinters, but there is no doubt that Howe will give a very good account of himself.

Andover's ability to cop the sprints this afternoon depends on whether Charley Rice, the sorrel-topped crack from Powder Point School, appears on the track. Jack McGee, coach of that school said today that Rice would run in both sprints. At Harvard, however, it is reported that Rice's entry has not been received.

Rice Has no Equal.

Should Rice perform, he will probably win from Paul Crary and Donald McRae of Andover. Rice has shown more than once that he must be ranked with the best schoolboy flyers in the country.

Chief Rodman should come through with victory in the hurdle events. If he performs as he did at Andover on Memorial Day, the record of twenty-five seconds, set up by F. P. Sheuber of the old Hopkinton school twelve years ago, should be surpassed.

The quarter mile record may be broken by M. R. Orr of Exeter. He has been faster than 50 2-5s for the distance this Spring, the record for the event.

In the shotput, Clifton Herd of Exeter should win hands down, although he can hardly approach Eddie Hart's record of 1907. The high jump looks like an easy victory for Louis Compton of Exeter, but the spectators will be treated to no such exhibition as was given at last year's event.

Providence After West Point Star

WEST POINT, N. Y., June 7.—he Providence team of the International League has made an offer to Cadet Otis K. Sadtler, captain of the Army nine, to play with that team during the remainder of the season. Sadtler will be graduated with his class next week and go on leave of absence until October 15. He has not yet decided to accept the offer.

To Investigate the "Baseball Trust"

WASHINGTON, June 7.—Plans for an investigation of the so-called "baseball trust" have been made by Representative Gallagher of Illinois, who will have a hearing within a week before the House committee on his resolution.

Sidelights on Sports

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

FRIENDS of Otto Hess looked for him to win a game as soon as the hot weather started in. And they expect him to keep on winning, or at least give a good account of himself in the box from now on. Hess is one of the veteran pitchers of the baseball business, and he requires time to get in the proper condition. That game in Chicago on Thursday showed what Hess can do when he is feeling right. It will be recalled that he won eight straight games toward the close of last season.

FRED SMITH, who took Sweeney's place when Captain Bill was injured in Chicago yesterday, has improved a lot since he was forced into the game early in the season when Sweeney was put off the field for sassing an umpire. In the morning practice on the South End grounds before the team went West, Smith was a source of wonder to his teammates. He was a member of what Stallings used to call his "twelve o'clock infield." This consisted of Calhoun on first, Smith at second, Cy Seymour at short and McDonald at third.

They took practice after all the others had had their workouts and had retired to the clubhouse. In all the days of practice Stallings said he never saw Smith fumble a ball. It is not improbable that he may develop into one of the greatest fielders the game ever produced, but of course he will have to be on the firing line for awhile before he gains the proper confidence in himself.

MANAGER GRIFFITH, of the Washington club, expects an immediate brace as soon as Eddie Foster joins the team. It is expected that he will report for work today and be in the lineup against the Tigers, who open a four-game series in Washington this afternoon. The little third sacker is now entirely recovered from his attack of typhoid. Foster is reported to be still a little wobbly, but says he is strong enough to get in the game at once. His return, besides strengthening the weakened Washington infield, will add a great deal to the offensive strength of the team.

Danny Moeller will be the chief gainer so far as individuals go. The hit-and-run play worked by this pair probably was the best of any team in the league. It was so well played that Moeller practically stole no bases in 1912, Foster working the hit-and-run with him almost every time Danny got on.

ST. LOUIS at least leads one league. Its team stands at the head of the percentage column of the League of Motor Cycle Racing Clubs. But this doesn't bring any world's series money to the Mound City.

Harvard Crew to Hold Trial Today

RED TOP, Ct., June 7.—This evening the Harvard varsity crew will take a time row, weather conditions permitting, and a good comparison of the Harvard and Yale crews to date can be had.

Adopting the English style, Captain Snowden of the Yale crew yesterday invited members of the Harvard quarters to witness the Yale varsity eight on a time trial up river over the course, which was accepted and a large gallery watched the crew row from the bridge to Red Top, finishing just before darkness set in. The Harvard party who saw the time row expressed themselves as thinking pretty well of the Yale crew.

CLEVELAND AND SOX IN FIRST CLASH TODAY

Joe Birmingham and his crew of pennant wreckers will battle the world's champion Red Sox today. Birmingham has a team of sluggers, while his pitching staff is performing like a well-oiled machine.

Men like Jackson, Lajoie, Graney Johnston and several others are enough to cause the ordinary pitcher to get a bad case of cold feet. Jackson and Lajoie in particular, are thirty-third degree reputation smashers.

The Red Sox, however feel in good spirits today, after their 4 to 3 victory over the Chicago Cubs yesterday, after twelve sensational innings of ball.

The champions played better ball yesterday than they have at any time this year. The men fought hard for everything in sight, and if they perform as well today they may be able to vanquish the Forest City pennant chasers.

Rodman Is Elected.

ANDOVER, June 7.—At a meeting of the Phillips Andover Academy track team Clifford Rodman, '15, of Los Angeles, Cal., was elected captain for next season.

STAR ATHLETES IN DORCHESTER GAMES TODAY

By THOMAS J. HALPIN.

(Quarter-mile Champion of United States and Canada.)

While the schoolboys will be striving for the honors offered at the different meets, the club athletes will assemble at Franklin Field to compete in the annual games that are held in connection with the Dorchester Day celebration. This meet is under the direction of the Park and Recreation department, headed by Hugh C. McGrath, who has guaranteed the athletes that the prizes will be the best yet offered at these games.

Nearly every athlete of note in this section of the country is entered. This list includes all of the club and college stars. O'Hara and Hiney of the B. A. A. will be the principal entries of this club in the 100-yard event, while Wilson of Tech, and many other lesser lights are also entered in this same race.

Barwise and Johnstone will fight it out in the high jump, while Hedlund and Silva will race in the two-mile event. Powers, also of the Unicorn Club, is the star entry in the mile run.

All of the North Dorchester athletes are entered in the different races, while the long distance runners from that club will attempt to capture the ten-mile run which is held under the direction of that association.

Wisconsin Crew Takes First Workout

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 7.—The brawny oarsmen from the University of Wisconsin who arrived here yesterday took their first real workout on the Hudson River today and showed excellent form. The other universities quartered in and around this city who will participate in the regatta on June 21 also sculled along the river in practice today.

Frank Mantell in Bout.

NEW YORK, June 7.—Bill Gropp of St. Louis and Frank Mantell of Pawtucket will meet in a ten-round affair Monday night.

Bike Stars in Big Races at Revere

All the stars entered for the big bike races at Revere tonight are in fine condition and eager for the start of the different events. Jimmy Moran is the surprise of the bunch, as the excellent weather the past week has put him in first-class condition. He is riding faster than at any time in three years.

Hard work is showing its effect, however, and Moran will make things interesting when he meets George Wiley, the world's champion, and Elmer Collins, in the twenty-five-mile paced race.

Hunter, Turville and Enden will try to cover three miles in three minutes, and the trio whirling around the eight-lap saucer should produce one of the most thrilling exhibitions ever seen in this section of the country.

Andover and Exeter in Battle Today

EXETER, N. H., June 7.—More than the usual annual excitement over the Exeter-Andover baseball game, which will be played here today, has been stirred up by the refusal of Exeter's baseball authorities to give out the exact lineup for the game.

Joe Eagan to Meet Sweeney at Arena

Joe Eagan, the clever South Boston lightweight, who has been performing in such fine style during the past year, has been matched to meet "Knockout" Sweeney of New York in one of the all-star ten-round bouts at the Atlas A. A. next Tuesday night. Sweeney is a corking good performer and is sure to give the local boy a rugged battle.

The complete card for next Tuesday night is as follows: Patsy Greene vs. Frank McManus, six rounds; Terry Brooks vs. Frankie Mack, ten rounds; Joe Eagan vs. "Knockout" Sweeney, ten rounds, and Charley Ledoux vs. Phil Mottoverra, ten rounds.

Ledoux is the French bantamweight champion and many experts consider him the best man of his weight in the world. He has knocked out Digger Stanley, while he has fought a draw with Kid Williams.

Kearns Outpointed.

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 7.—George "One-Round" Davis outpointed Soldier Kearns in a ten-round heavyweight bout last night. Davis led in the first eight rounds, but Kearns came back strong in the last two.

What Has Gone Before

GORDON KELLY, a young man from the mountains, who says that he has never played on any ball club and that he has never even seen a ball game in his life, induces Manager Bill Smith of the Atlanta club to give him a tryout. By his phenomenal playing in the field and his no less phenomenal batting, he becomes almost immediately the sensation of the base ball world. Fifteen of the sixteen big league presidents journey to Atlanta to secure him, and the Boston Red Sox finally buy his release from the Atlanta club for $50,000.

In the meantime he meets and falls in love with Mildred Deery, daughter of Galen Deery, a rich lumber speculator. The girl, who is in her turn much impressed, has remained in ignorance of his athletic eminence, and goes to see the last appearance in Atlanta of the "Fifty Thousand Dollar Beauty," without the least idea that her friend is that famous star.

In the last half of the ninth inning, with the score 9 to 6 against Atlanta, two out and the bases full, Gordon hits a terrific smash. He sends in three runs, but in sliding for home he crashes into the catcher, is knocked unconscious and his leg is broken. Mildred Deery runs on to the field and takes his head in her lap. Gordon knows nothing of her share in this sensational incident until, several days later, he reads the papers in the hospital. As soon as he can he calls up the Deery home on the telephone, only to be told that "Miss Deery is out of town and it is not known when she will return." The night after he leaves the hospital, Gordon Kelly disappears as if from the face of the earth.

When Galen Deery, learns how his daughter figured on the ball field, he is thunderstruck and arranges to take her up to his bungalow in the mountains. Forrest Cain, who has become Gordon's enemy, is also in love with Mildred and follows her to the mountains, where he remains until recalled to Atlanta by his sister's illness.

One day Mildred goes on a fishing trip with Elmer Shephard a boy, and is surprised by the sudden appearance of a young man. Misty brown eyes look into steady blue-gray eyes for a moment. Then Mildred aways slightly and falls into the outstretched arms of Gordon Kelly.

Now Go On With the Story

Copyright, 1912, by International News Service.

CHAPTER XXIV.

GORDON KELLY held Mildred Deery in his embrace a full minute, may-be. Her head rested on his breast and she felt his heart beating like a triphammer. At last she sighed happily and, raising her head, she smiled faintly in his serious face.

"Gordon," she murmured, "won't you say something?"

Gordon gulped once or twice convulsively. He tried to talk, but his voice broke on the first syllable. He tried again.

"Mildred, dear," he said, hoarsely, "can it be you? I can't believe it. I have been thinking of you and only you for six long weeks. I tried to find you and——"

"How hard did you try?" Mildred interrupted. She released herself from his arms. She was beginning to recover herself.

"Why, Mildred, I called up your house just as soon as they would let me. I called up every day for more than a week and then every other day and then every three or four days and I always received the same answer. You had gone away and they didn't know where you were or when you would return. I did all I could. I couldn't move for some time and I——"

"And you finally stopped calling up altogether. Well, I don't think you made much of an effort. Didn't it occur to you to call up my father or my mother. If you were so much interested?"

Oh, the perversity of women. If Mildred Deery were to confess it, her thoughts had been on Gordon Kelly almost constantly for the six weeks since last she had seen him. Here he was in flesh and blood standing before her, and she was now apparently trying to fret him.

"I—I—don't know much about these things," he stammered. "What have I done, Mildred? I only——"

An Interruption

"I got him, Mildred! I got him!" yelled the voice of Elmer Shephard in the distance. "I knew there was a big fellow in there. Where are you, Mildred?"

They could hear him crashing through the underbrush. Mildred moved a few paces away from Gordon. Presently Elmer bounded over a boulder and came into view on the other side of the brook. He stopped short at seeing the stranger.

"Keep right on, Elmer, and we will meet you in the road and then we will go to the oaks and have luncheon," said Mildred. She had forgotten all about the lad, but now, mischievously enough, she welcomed his presence. Gordon, too, felt the tension relax. The lad, coming on the scene, would give him a breathing spell and allow him time to collect his wits that Mildred had so ruthlessly scattered.

Picking up her fishing tackle, Gordon assisted Mildred up the embankment that bordered the road. Elmer was there before them. He held a large fish by the gills on one finger and proudly displayed his catch.

"Elmer," said Mildred, "this is my friend, Mr. Kelly. We met in the most"——

"Gordon Kelly. Gee whiz!" exclaimed Elmer, jumping up and down in his excitement. He was a little fellow for his age, whole-souled and outspoken. Mildred laughed and so did Gordon.

"Aren't you going to shake hands with Mr. Kelly?" asked Mildred, for Elmer, in the sensations of the moment, had not seen Gordon's outstretched hand. The lad dropped the fish he held and put his small hand in that of the tall young man. There was only five years' difference in the ages of the two, yet one was a little log and the other a full grown man.

"I am glad to meet you," said Gordon, pleasantly. "But how did you know my first name?"

The Cat Out of the Bag.

"Oh, I read all about you in the papers and I have seen your picture dozens of times. Besides, Mildred and I have talked about you."

"Elmer!" exclaimed Mildred, blushing furiously.

"We did, too, just as we were starting out this morning. You know we did."

"You did the talking about Mr. Kelly, if I'm not mistaken," returned Mildred. "However, I guess there was no harm done and, as I'm getting hungry, I suggest we change the subject and have something to eat. Won't you join us, Mr. Kelly?"

"Thank you, but I'm afraid I have fallen into the ball players' habit of two meals a day—a late breakfast and a hearty dinner at night."

"We will allow you to sit with us and watch us eat, then," said Mildred. "Or would you prefer to resume your fishing?"

"I guess not," laughed Gordon. He knew he would have to begin all over again with Mildred, but he felt sure of himself now. "I'll just gather up my rod and not, however," he added. "I had a fish nearly landed when I saw you, but I forgot all about him."

They were soon comfortably seated under a huge oak tree, Mildred, with a shy glance at Gordon, pulled her short skirt down as far as it would go, leaned back against the trunk of a tree, and, selecting a sandwich from the napkin that held them, bit into it daintily.

"Now, then, Mr. Gordon Kelly, give an account of yourself," she said. "What are you doing up here?"

"They had no further use for me at the hospital, so I just came up; that's all," replied Gordon.

"Why did you come here?"

"Because I had no other place to go. I live here."

"Live here!" exclaimed Mildred. "Live where?"

"Right here," replied Gordon, with an amused smile. "We are sitting on my property now."

"Goodness gracious, I didn't know that," said Mildred, as though she was doing something she ought not to do.

"Certainly, that bridge that crosses the brook is at the southern boundary line."

"Oh, I know. I know," Elmer broke in, excitedly. "That road that goes through the big granite posts leads to your house, doesn't it?"

"You've guessed it, Elmer," replied Gordon.

"Well, I declare," said Mildred. "Tell us all about it, Mr. Kelly."

"With pleasure, Miss Deery," laughed Gordon, emphasizing the last two words as though to recall to her mind that she had called him by his first name not many minutes ago. "There's not much to tell. The road leads to a house and I live in the house. Now, please allow me to ask a few questions. What are you doing up here?"

"Because I had no other place to go. I live here." She smiled mischievously.

Elmer rolled on his back and kicked up his heels.

"Ha ha, I guess she's got you there, Mr. Kelly," he said. He had been feasting his eyes on the great Gordon Kelly all the while. Mildred watched him with a smile.

"You're right, Elmer," Then, turning to Mildred, Gordon said:

"But just where do you live; I am very much interested in my neighbors."

"Oh, just on the other side of the brook; on my father's property."

"That can't be your father's property. It is owned by the Southern Land & Development Company."

"Galen Deery is the Southern Land & Development Company," replied Mildred with a little toss of her head.

"Oh, I see," mused Gordon.

"And I guess you don't own this property, either," declared Elmer, who would stick up for Mildred if it came to a question. "Dad's got a map and it says this land is owned by the Prescott Trust Company."

Gordon laughed.

"You win all the arguments, Elmer," he said. "You are right. It was a whim of my father's to put all his land in a company's name. But now that we've found each other out I hope it won't make bad neighbors of us."

"We will have to see about that," replied Mildred, with a sly look.

"Now I begin to understand," exclaimed Gordon. "You live in that house they were building when I went to Atlanta."

"Say, Mr. Kelly, you didn't do a thing to them down there, did you?" broke in Elmer. "Say that last hit you made was a corker, wasn't it? You remember, Mildred, you were there."

Mildred's face grew crimson.

"You little turncoat, you were on my side a minute ago," was all she could say in her embarrassment.

"That's all right, I'm with you now," said the lad. "But it was mighty good of her, wasn't it, Mr. Kelly, to run out on the field to help you?"

"Indeed it was, Elmer," replied Gordon, soberly. He had meant to tell her so at the right time, but now he noted Mildred's confusion and turned the subject quickly by asking:

"What luck did you have this morning?"

That gave the lad a chance to tell all about the morning's sport. He found Kelly knew all the best pools, as he had fished every rod of the stream your father owns. Gordon told them tales of his hunting in the mountains that made Elmer's eyes glisten. Mildred listened dreamily. There was no intimate conversation such as she secretly wished there could be if the lad was not present. But that would come. She longed to have Gordon tell her all about himself, but the pleasure of anticipation is always great.

The time passed all too quickly, and it was after 4 o'clock before they realized it. Mildred spoke of going home. Gordon jumped to his feet and helped her to arise.

A Surprising Young Man

"You will let me see you again soon?" he said.

"Oh, yes," she replied, and then paused a moment. "But not for a day or two. I will let you know. Have you a telephone. Ring three times? I will remember. Please don't call me up; you will hear from me. Well, good-by." She held out her hand.

"Wait a minute," said Gordon. "I'll be right back." He disappeared through the trees on the run and returned in three or four minutes. "Now we can walk to the bridge if you like."

They walked slowly and lingered on the bridge for a while, as if loath to part. Gordon looked at his watch.

"Give me two minutes more," he said. Even as he spoke there was the sound of a vehicle coming rapidly down the road and presently a high-powered automobile of the latest model, driven by a negro lad, slowed down and stopped at the bridge.

"I'll drive my friends home, Steve," said Gordon to the negro boy. "You walk here until I return."

"Is this your automobile?" cried Mildred in surprise. "Where in the world did it come from?"

"I telephoned for it," replied Gordon, smiling. "Another whim of my father's. He had telephones strung to every corner of the property."

"Gee whiz, that's going some," observed Elmer.

Mildred said nothing. She was thinking of the strange Gordon Kelly, a big player, who owned a vast estate in the mountains and had servants at his beck and call who brought automobiles to him as if by magic.

CHAPTER XXV.

WHEN Gordon Kelley jumped on the tail of the express wagon in Atlanta, he told the driver to go to the terminal station. On the way there he decided to effectually conceal his movements, if it were possible to do so. He wanted more time to think. It is true he had had several weeks in which he did hardly anything else than think, but with his problem fatil unsolved he wanted to devote some more time to it, or get it off his mind altogether. The problem, of course, was Mildred Deery.

On the way to the terminal he got a check for his trunk from the driver and told him to take the trunk to the baggage room. He paid the driver and got off the wagon a quarter of a mile from the terminal, leaving it to go on and deliver the trunk as ordered. Then he went to an express office, delivered his check and arranged to have the trunk forwarded to Steve Jackson, Pow Creek, Ga. After this was done he went to the freight office and after a good deal of trouble succeeded in getting permission to ride in the caboose of the night freight to Chattanooga. One is sometimes able to arrange these things under proper persuasion.

It was in the gray of the morning that he dropped off the train, without being noticed, when it stopped at Pew Creek. It was all of a twelve-mile walk to his home, but he started off, and it was not until he reached the bridge where later he met Mildred that he was able to make use of one of the telephones on his property and order an automobile to take him the rest of the way. Steve Jackson, his negro boy, quickly answered the summons, and that is the way Gordon Kelly reached his mountain home without anyone being the wiser. An hour later he had Judge Barlee on the telephone.

"This is Gordon," he said. "I am up home and I want particularly to ask you not to tell a soul where I am. You can reach me any time you wish but if you should call please ask for Mr. Gordon. I don't want anyone to know where I am for a while. Yes, everything is all right but I am trying to avoid a lot of annoyance. Good-bye."

With that off his mind Gordon proceeded to settle down to his old mode of life; that is as much as his troubled thoughts would allow him to.

"Now then, Mr. Gordon Kelly," said Mildred, "give an account of yourself. What are you doing up here?"

THE greatest words are always solitaires,
Set singly in one syllable; like birth,
Life, love, hope, peace. I sing the worth
Of that dear word toward which the whole word fares—
I sing of home.

To make a home, we should take all of love,
And much of labor, patience and keen joy.
Then mix the elements of earth's alloy
With finer things drawn from the realms above,
The spirit-home.

There should be music, melody and song,
Beauty in every spot; an open door
And generous sharing of the pleasure store
With fellow pilgrims as they pass along,
Seeking for home.

Make ample room for silent friends—the books—
That give so much and only ask for space.
Nor let Utility crowd out the vase
Which has no use save gracing by its looks
The precious home.

To narrow bounds, let mirrors lend their aid
And multiply each gracious touch of art.
And let the casual stranger feel the part—
The great creative part—that love has played
Within the home.

Here bring your best in thought and word and deed.
Your sweetest acts, your highest self-control;
Nor save them for some la ter hour and goal,
Here is the place, and now the time of need,
Here in your home.

Music Hath Charms

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

WHEN you can't think of any other way of complimenting the playing of a girl at the piano, say that she plays "with expression." This will please her and means anything. If she murders the piece, there is the expression of murder in every bang of her fingers. Another pleasing compliment is to say she has a "good touch." This is also a pill she will swallow and believe till her dying day that it was sugar all through.

When a girl stops in playing because she has lost her way, her mother thinks the pause is to give "expression."

Ask any girl who was the greatest musical composer, and she will think of the wedding march and say "Mendelssohn."

There are some women who never play the piano in any other way than as if trying a piece for the first time.

Every girl has so much faith in her friends' standing by her that when she is on the program at a concert she takes a second piece with her for the encore.

There is no denying that when Daughter marries and takes the piano with her the rest of the family miss it. It was such a convenient place on which to drop hats and gloves.

Some girls think that to sing with expression means to keep the tremolo stop in their lungs pulled open.

Every girl who plays the piano at a concert demands that the piano be turned to the right or left, or the lid be raised or lowered, or the stool turned. She makes more fuss than a general getting ready for battle.

When an amateur singer announces that she will sing a certain song "by request," she should give the name of the one who made the request so that the audience may know on whom to place the blame.

The Mistakes of Jennie

BY HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a City Girl

"The Fellows Were Great Spenders"

Chapter 8.

WHEN Jennie told Tom that she would never, never marry him, it broke the boy all up. He and Jennie had grown up together and Tom had never had another girl. Hadn't even ever thought of another—his whole world had been Jennie—but he had always put off asking her to marry him until he could make a little more money.

But what Jennie had told him about THE MAN made him want to take and protect her, for Tom knew of the WOLVES whose only thoughts are preying on young girls. Jennie's mother also was broken-hearted, for she had always looked upon Tom as a good, manly young fellow and had always hoped that some day he and Jennie would be married.

Jennie had assumed a brazen air and didn't care what her mother or father thought about her escapade or her refusal to marry Tom. Why SHOULD she marry Tom? They wouldn't have more than barely enough to exist on—no pleasures, good clothes and good times. Bah! Jennie wanted to see LIFE and REAL living—and the REAL living to her poor little mind was the glamour of the things she had seen only on the surface.

Like ice on the surface of a river—she didn't see the black, black, swirling water underneath. The next day Jennie got real chummy with one of the girls at the office who did not live at home, got less salary than Jennie—but who always had good clothes and SEEMED always to have good times. "She knew an awfully jolly bunch, and didn't Jennie want to come along the next night—she knew a dandy fellow that would just suit Jennie, and they would have HEAPS of fun."

The fellows she went with were great SPENDERS, and always bought her anything she wanted—so SHE said. All of which quite dazzled Jennie, and she could hardly wait for the next evening to go out with her new found girl friend.

A SERMON FOR MANY

By William F. Kirk

WHEN the long, hard day has vanished and you seek your waiting bed,
Try to live the dead hours over ere the pillow soothes your head
Try to find some explanation for each thoughtless thing you've done;
Try to make some reparation for the trouble you've begun
After all the petty gossip that you scattered through the day.
Think of how you knocked your neighbor, going calmly on his way.
Drag the unkind slings and arrows down from Memory's dusty shelf—
Then stand up before the mirror and begin to knock yourself.

Do not stand there smug and smirking, do not smooth your tousled hair!
Shake your fist at your reflection! Give yourself an icy glare!
Don't resolve that you are handsome when you ought to know you're not;
Rather tell the faithful mirror that it flatters you a lot.
Make wry faces by the dozen; try a cold, contemptuous sneer—
Such as you have tried on others. Give yourself a mocking leer
Then the mirror will remind you, as all honest mirrors do,
That you're not one man in thousands—that you're only LITTLE YOU!

A Social Graft

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"Seek not to purchase friends with gifts, for when thou ceaseth to give, such friends will cease to be friends."

THE great financier who spends many anxious hours in counting his resources, which appear inadequate to meet his greater liabilities, has his counterpart in every girl you know.

If her purse is flat, and kept in that pitiful condition by necessities; or if it is corpulent because of the generosity of a wealthy father, has no bearing on the moment of times its owner sees bank empties staring her in the face.

A bankruptcy brought on less often by purchases for herself, and which either she needs or thinks she needs, than by purchases for her friends. She is a victim of the gift habit, the greatest of all social graces.

There is no occasion these days that is not made a holiday for the purpose of dividing coins from the purses of friends for the buying of gifts. Beginning with New Years and ending with Christmas, there isn't a date on the calendar that isn't marked by some mischievous person as an occasion for making a present to somebody else, the object of the giving being solely to financially embarrass the donor and make miserable the recipient by adding another name to the burden of her obligations.

EASTER GIFTS

We have become so obsessed with the insanity of giving that we have broken into the children's province and make gifts on Easter; we have thrust ourselves among the joyful and send celebrities to friends and mere acquaintances; we must remember every birthday, or afford; we must send decorated cards expressing in pale sentiments about peace and happiness every time the day is outlived, and after passing through a year of giving that which we cannot afford, and which is never wanted, we thrust every bit of sense and fulfilment to the winds and go mad in making gifts at Christmas.

This social graft is hard on every one, but its worst victims are young girls. They must make gifts they cannot afford to their friends who graduate. A few years later a friend's engagement is announced, and a girl must give a betrothal gift, followed in a few weeks by a wedding present and, in what seems a criminally short time to the owner of a depleted purse, by a demand for a little token to be placed in the baby's layette. There must be a gift for the christening, an anniversary wedding present for the mother; she has a birthday, her baby has a birthday; there are more babies, more christenings, more birthdays, till the friend who is seeking to keep up with the demands this custom mates feels that she will go mad.

She begins to regard every new baby as a means for imposing a tax on her friendship—a tax that is collected relentlessly, and from which no personal need for the money thus expended will release her.

HOPEFUL GIRLS.

Girls are the biggest hearted, most generous creatures that walk the earth, hopeful to a degree that is dangerous, they will squander this week's income on a friend, thinking to be more prudent with the income of next week. They buy first for their friends, and count their own needs of little importance. They will buy meagre lunches, wear patched shoes and gloves, if need be, rather than have it said they refused to "come across."

And that is what I beg they will no longer do. Give to the friend who needs, and give when love prompts the giving, always making gifts that meet the needs of the recipient and don't embarrass the donor, but don't give simply because custom demands it.

Don't be one of the large and growing flock of sheep that are breaking their financial necks trying to limp along well after wall of senseless and haughtary obligations to friends, the greatest of which is the custom of regarding every date on the calendar as a reminder to make some one a gift.

A Birthday Gift

Her—the worst thing about me is my nose; I've got such a beastly one.

She—You shouldn't say such things about a girl.

Her—A girl? I re—don't understand.

She—Wasn't it a birthday present?

A Bachelor's Diary

By MAX

MAY 3.—The widow said when she left here that she would not go alone.

Just what did she mean by that? I puzzled over the question till I grew dazed, and then decided to turn the problem over to Sally Spencer.

If a woman is planning to run off with another woman's husband, surely the wife has a right to know it. A wife hasn't many rights, I will grant, but the most zealous opponent of equal suffrage would grant her this one.

The opportunity came this morning when Manette awoke with a slight fever, and Richards ran across the lawn to ask Mrs. Spencer to come over. It proved only a trifling ailment, but the dearth of Elizabeth has reduced us all to a state of pitiable cowardice, and Mrs. Spencer, after ministering to the child's wants, felt such apprehension that she decided to remain all day.

I had my little girl in my arms and she had fallen asleep with her hands clasped around my neck. It is a favorite attitude of Manette's when she doesn't feel quite herself. Sometimes I have thought that my fear of losing her unconsciously instills in her heart a fear of losing me, and the almost convulsive grasp with which she holds me at such times is the outward evidence.

Richards had taken Sarah Rae Hartman for a walk, and Sally and I were alone. She looked thin and worn, and showed a fatigue deeper than the merely physical. She looked tired in her heart and soul.

"Sally, my dear girl," I whispered, "brace up!"

The day before when I had begged her to end her torture by sending her guest home she had given a laugh which almost convinced me she was having a very comfortable time of it, and didn't mind it a bit if her husband was in love with another woman. But this morning, when she tried to smile, her lip quivered, and the next moment she was down on her knees beside my chair with her face buried in Manette's dress, sobbing as if her heart would break.

A GOOD CRY

"Sally," I begged, "don't, please don't!"

I do not recall what I said to her in the next half hour, but my words of comfort were poured into deaf ears, and she continued to sob until physically exhausted.

"What shall I do, Max?" she cried at last. "What shall I do? I thought I was strong enough to play the game to the end, but I can not. When I see the way he looks at her, Max, I feel as if I would go mad. And I have been his wife for twenty years! And, oh, Max, no one knows how hard I have tried to be the sort of a wife a man like him wants."

"And you have succeeded," I argued. "Jack knows that. Why, he doesn't love this woman!"

To which she replied with sobs that if I had seen the way he looked at her last night I would think he loved her.

I had seen it. If Jack Spencer had left uncovered any proof that is as sure I can't imagine what it can be, and I longed to tell him so.

I thought best to be frank with her, and told her, after repeated assertions that Jack didn't love Mrs. Brown, but was playing the fool, what the widow had said to me about not going home alone.

"If she is planning to take your husband with her," I said, "you ought to know it."

It has been argued that women should not have suffrage because they cannot go to war. I would like to know why they can't go to war. The moment I told this to Sally Spencer and she got the whiff of an approaching conflict she stopped weeping, dried her eyes and braced up.

She was ready for battle. It was the long suspense of weary waiting that had tried her soul. "She is right," she almost laughed when she said it; "she will not go alone."

"Would it make it easier for you, dear, if I went with her?"

READY TO FIGHT

"She would drag you to the altar," Sally answered; "she can't drag Jack there."

"But she can drag him into the mire."

"She will not drag him into the mire, and," a trifle bitterly, "what if she did? Isn't it every wife's duty when her husband is dragged into the mire by some other woman to spend the rest of her days in helping to rid him of the vermin?"

There was no denying the truth of that assertion. When a man defiles his garments, it is his wife who cleans them.

Somehow I disliked Sally's assertion that the widow would drag me to the altar.

"No woman," I contended, a little hotly, "could marry me against my will. But when I said it I knew I didn't say the truth. There never was a man some woman couldn't drag to the altar, and there are mighty few men who get there without being dragged.

"You have been a bachelor so long," she went on, "that you are growing too sure of yourself. A man escapes easily between the ages of thirty and forty-five. It is after he has passed that age that he becomes proud of his skill in dodging the noose and grows careless. If we women can't catch them under thirty it is best to go after them when they are fifty."

We laughed, and because I knew that such talk took her mind off the main worry, I encouraged it.

"You don't realize, Max, what a catch you are. A millionaire, a beautiful home, a generous disposition, good looking, cultured and kind. Why, any woman who knows of your love for that child would ask no greater happiness than to be your wife. I'd go after you myself if I were not married to Jack Spencer."

VERY EMBARRASSING

The laughing look in her eyes suddenly died away. A quick blush mantled her cheeks, and she looked at me in an oddly speculative way I had never dreamed of. I felt strangely and unaccountably embarrassed, and why I should feel embarrassment when with a woman I had always regarded as I would a favorite sister I could neither define nor set aside.

She walked to the window and stood there looking out, not more than a moment, Diary, but it seemed an hour. Turning quickly, she said, avoiding my eyes, "Manette is so much better, I will go home."

"Sally"—I began.

She had reached the door. I could not turn my head without disturbing the child, but I knew she was standing there. "Dear girl," I went on, but I got no further.

She turned quickly and ran across the room to me. The next moment she was kneeling over the back of my chair. I bent back my head to get a good look at her. Her hands clasped over my eyes, she leaned a little nearer, and then, Diary, she kissed me!

Keep Your Nerve!

That's the "go-ahead" part of you.

¶The best of us now and then feel the wear and tear of every-day action. Sometimes it's the stress of business; often the worries of household care; occasionally the penalty of social duty.

¶But whatever the cause, when the nerves begin to cry, it's time to think of recruiting nerve strength.

¶Some seek medicine—and medicine sometimes helps; but the natural way to recruit nerve strength is by supplying the missing elements of true nerve nourishment which are lacking in one's every-day diet.

(ask your doctor about that)

is recommended to your notice because it is rich in abundance of brain- and nerve-building material, especially Phosphate of Potash, the vital tissue salt of the gray nerve cells.

¶Scientists know that nerve strength rests upon nutrition—a nutrition that supplies water, albumin and organic Phosphate of Potash—the three vital elements that, according to their supply or lack, make nerves strong or weak.

¶Ordinary food provides water and albumin in plentiful amount but organic Phosphate of Potash is frequently lacking in the usual diet.

¶Grape-Nuts provides it. This food is made from Nature's field grains, preserving the natural organic salts of wheat and barley (which the miller of white bread flour rejects) for building brain, blood, bone and brawn as Nature intended.

¶Grocers sell Grape-Nuts, an economical food that answers every purpose of providing rich, true nutrition for body, brain and nerves.

"There's a Reason"

CLOSING STOCKS AND NEWS OF BOSTON, NEW YORK AND EUROPEAN MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

The Boston market was irregular at the close after a quiet session. Among mines, Indiana and Osceola showed good gains, the former being up 1 and the latter 3. Both New Haven and Boston & Maine advanced fractionally, while Shoe Machinery was down a point.

New York finished weaker after a morning in which trading was of fair volume. Among stocks to show the most losses were Union Pacific, off 1, American Can 2⅜, Canadian Pacific 1¼ and American Smelting ⅞. Leading stocks there averaged about ¼ lower at the end.

Today's New York bank statement showed excess cash reserve to be $26,682,250, decrease $1,943,200; loans increase $834,000; specie decrease $148,000; legal tender decrease $1,641,000; net deposits decrease $610,000; circulation increase $226,000. Actual statement: loans decrease $10,912,000; specie increase $842,000; legal tender decrease $439,000; net deposits decrease $11,032,000; reserve increase $2,779,900.

Prices Mixed at Opening.

Prices were somewhat mixed at the opening of the New York market. A number of issues declined because traders were reluctant to follow yesterday's advance, while others made moderate gains in first transactions. One favorable feature was an absence of selling pressure. In London American stocks and Canadian Pacific were stronger in early trading, but some weakened at the end because of Berlin selling. The London market was dull and hesitating. But strain had relaxed and prices ranged higher. This made foreign sentiment much more cheerful. Selling of Canadian Pacific in Europe weakened that issue in New York. It declined more than a point within the first few minutes.

Most traders were reluctant to have any important lines outstanding over Sunday, particularly as there is a possibility that the United States Supreme Court will hand down a decision in the Minnesota rate case on Monday. That tribunal reconvenes then. This was manifested by a disposition to even up accounts.

Frisco Investigation Begun.

Without waiting for action by Congress the Interstate Commerce Commission has begun an inquiry into the receivership for the St. Louis & San Francisco road. Representative Hinebaugh of Illinois introduced a House resolution for an investigation, and when it was referred to the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee Chairman Adamson of the latter waived the formality of a hearing and sent it to the Interstate Commerce Commission. He at once received word that the commission would get the information required.

"I am satisfied that a thorough investigation by the Interstate Commerce Commission will demonstrate that the Frisco system has never been conducted as a legitimate transportation company," said Mr. Hinebaugh, "but that it has been made the basis of a tremendous jobbing scheme to enrich the men who have been in a position to manipulate its securities.

"I believe it will also be found that great volumes of the stocks and bonds of this company have been sold far in excess of the true value of the tangible property owned by the corporation."

McReynolds Displeases President.

A Washington dispatch states that the course pursued by Attorney-General McReynolds in publicly discussing the possibility of further procedure against the "Tobacco Trust" and Standard Oil has displeased President Wilson.

"Mr. Wilson," it is said, "summoned the Attorney-General to the White House and emphasized his displeasure over the publicity given to plans that had not yet received the approval of the President—plans which in fact, had not been submitted to him.

It is true the President knew of the progressive excise tax plan of the Attorney-General, but the introduction of the resolution by Senator Hitchcock came as a distinct surprise to him.

"What Mr. McReynolds did, coming with the unrest caused by the discussion of tariff legislation, has given the President some uneasiness and has not served to make any closer the relations between Mr. Wilson and the Attorney-General, which, it was reported some days ago, were becoming strained.

"There is a revival of the rumor today that Mr. McReynolds may find it convenient to withdraw from the official family of the President."

Roads Must Have More Revenue.

George D. Dixon, vice-president of the Pennsylvania, says it is vital that railroads be allowed to raise freight rates.

"For several years," he said, "the tendencies have been towards a steady increase, partly forced and partly warranted, in wages which are now 37.1 per cent. higher than in 1900; in the ratio of cost of operation to total earnings, which in 1900 for every dollar earned was 67.73 cents, against 78.09 cents in 1912; and in the cost of capital.

"We feel that we ought as a matter of sound policy, to be permitted to earn a greater margin between income and outgo.

"If the investor is not assured of a safe return on his money he will not supply the capital for our purposes, and unless conditions can be made such as to attract that money, both the railroads and the public they serve will suffer."

In the initial dealings Reading was ⅝ higher, at 157¼, and the same amount of gain was made in Amalgamated, which sold at 68⅝.

Slight recessions were recorded in Union Pacific, Southern Pacific and Great Northern preferred. Other railroads and industrials were well held.

The Curb market was firm.

Financial News in Brief.

The $200,000 which will go to Antwerp today brings gold exports so far this year up to $58,385,000.

Orders received by the United States Steel Corporation for two months past have not averaged much more than fifty per cent. of capacity.

The New York Telephone Company will put into effect next month a reduction of tolls which, it is estimated, will save telephone users more than $650,000 a year.

May production of Calumet & Hecla and subsidiaries is estimated at 10,765,428 pounds, compared with 10,582,870 in April last, and 11,643,529 in May, 1911.

You Can Have Pretty Hands and Arms

The new, simplified beauty-bath for hands and arms consists in cleansing and drying the skin carefully, then bathing them for a few minutes in a quart of warm water in which is put a scant teaspoonful pulverized eumol. This solution should be allowed to dry slowly on the skin. Employing these beauty-baths banishes the red, harsh condition of the skin, and because of the loosening and rubbing off of the dead outer surface, tan, freckles, liver spots, "water marks" and other blemishes soon vanish and a clear softness and opalescent tint quickly follows.

For best results, these baths should be used night and morning. Any druggist can supply pulverized eumol in 4-ounce original packages at little cost. Never buy it in bulk, for its purity and strength is uncertain.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

Bob Burman, the speed king, was so well pleased with the Keeton car, which he so ably drove in the Indianapolis 500-mile race, that he has asked the Keeton Company to give him another chance with the car in next year's race and will sign a contract with the company covering the 1914 contest.

The Keeton challenge for a race for $20,000 per side has been accepted by A. G. Kaufman, president of the Peugeot Auto Import Company of New York, who will delay the departure of his party for Europe until the final arrangement has been concluded for the contest.

Colonel William D. Sohier, chairman of the Massachusetts Highway Commission, will be a delegate to the International Road Congress, to be held this year in London, June 23 to 28.

The management of the New England branch of the Peerless Motor Car Company has picked out the Point of Pines for the annual outing of their employes to be held on June 17. There will be about 200 in the party and the day will be spent in athletic games, followed by a banquet at the Point of Pines Hotel.

Since becoming interested in the Bible a few years ago, in harmony with his disposition to surmount the insurmountable, he has wrestled with the formerly unsolved questions of Christendom and has startling revelations to make on some of them. No collection. Seats free. NOTE—This is a continuation of the series held in Tremont Theatre for the last three weeks.

Three Ships at a Time as an Example

It did not require any extra session of Parliament to elicit from the British First Lord of the Admiralty the prompt announcement that three battleships that were to have been laid down next March for the British Navy will, instead, be laid down at once on account of the rejection by the Canadian Senate of the naval bill.

The United Kingdom had hoped that Canada would relieve it of at least a small part of the vast expense of naval construction. But, as that is not yet to be, the Admiralty goes at it thoroughly and without a day's loss of time.

They would no more think of dilly-dallying with their navy in Great Britain THAN A MERCHANT WOULD THINK OF LETTING HIS INSURANCE LAPSE ON A GREAT STORE filled with millions of dollars' worth of merchandise.

Whether Great Britain has the merchandise, the broad, world-wide trade, because she has the battleships, the insurance fully paid up, it would be hard to determine. But this much is certain: She DID have the sea power before she had the trade.

Three new battleships, mark you, not one! There is economy and speed of construction in three. Every smallest part is made in triple, and the three can be ready almost as soon as one.

THAT IS WHAT JAPAN IS DOING. FOUR ships of a class are being built for her simultaneously in English yards, THREE more in her home yards. One of the four is already afloat in English waters.

We lag behind with ONE laid down this year. A bill appropriating $15,000,000 for three new, first-class battleships was introduced in Congress yesterday. We are told that enough even of the "pork-barrel" politicians have learned their lesson within the last few weeks to pass the bill through both House and Senate, in the present mood of Representatives and Senators.

MOODS DO NOT BUILD BATTLESHIPS! The people of the United States demand more than moods and sentiment and patriotic phrases toward the maintenance of peace. THEY DEMAND ACTION.

IN THE INTERESTS OF PEACE, therefore, and in pursuance of the only method humanity has yet devised to ensure peace, LET CONGRESS PASS THIS BILL FOR THREE NEW BATTLESHIPS AT THIS SESSION AND AT ONCE.

It is reported from a very authoritative source that in a frank after-dinner talk the predecessor of the present Japanese Ambassador to the United States said that what the Japanese would have to fear, if anything, in a war with this country, would be not OUR navy, nor OUR army, nor anything WE could do, but RUSSIA. No doubt he was polite. No doubt he gilded the humiliating truth he was honest enough to state. But did he tell ALL the truth? Supposing Japan had previously made its terms with Russia! Or supposing that the Japanese mind should change!

The moral is startlingly plain. Let this newspaper again repeat the truth that REAL PATRIOTISM IS EVEN MORE NECESSARY IN TIME OF PEACE THAN IN TIME OF WAR.

An Immigrant Gives Up Her Life to Save a Child

The Same Day a Bill Proposing to Restrict Immigration Is Introduced in the United States Senate. Whether Annie Cullen Could Read and Write Is Not Reported, But No One Knows What She Might Have Done for This Country Had It Been Given Her to Live.

Wednesday an immigrant girl gave up her life in Medford to save a little child.

Wednesday a bill was introduced in the United States Senate proposing to restrict immigration. That bill might have excluded this eighteen-year-old girl from this country.

How many of our ninety millions of people could surpass her in nobility? She stood on a railroad track in front of an on-coming express train. She had time only to choose between herself and the little child. She chose the child and threw it to safety on the station platform.

If that girl could have lived, would this country not have been richer for her presence?

No general test, whether of literacy or of the possession of worldly goods, can ascertain the desirability of an immigrant. If they have character and health and the capacity to be assimilated by our people without deterioration, they are desirable immigrants. They bring to us an ample surplus of capital when they bring us character, good health, energy and ambition.

Whether Annie Cullen could read or write is not reported. But no books could ever give her the character and the noble unselfishness which made her forget herself and yet permitted her to retain her self-possession and self-control while she saved the child.

No one knows what Annie Cullen might have done for this country if it had been given her to live.

Girls like Annie Cullen have been the mothers of great men. In the approaching emancipation of women, perhaps, the girl might have been a Joan of Arc to the people of this country in some social or political crisis of the years to come.

SONG OF SUMMER

By E. T. SWEET

HOW dull, indeed, the old world seems
When Summer sun mounts high;
All business drags as listless crowds
Mope 'neath the brassy sky.
How purposeless all things would be
Did some bright soul not say
In tones that cause a quickening pulse:
"Who's going to pitch today?"
